On April 18, 1996, the skeletal remains of a white, male human body were recovered from the bank of the Missouri River in Franklin County, Mo. A coroner's review of the body determined the race and sex, and determined the male was approximately 50-65 years old and that his height was approximately 5'6". The left lower side of the man's nose would have been noticeably lower than the right side of his nose. Time since death was probably two to eight months.
